

The Callers' Life

By the callers' wife

*Our husbands, they are callers,
You know them, one and all,
We love to hear them sing to you,
We love to hear them call.
So if you would, please help us out,
Do what they call "just right",
Cause, when this dance is over,
We go home with them tonight.*

*We hear about their "doe-see-doe's",
Promenades and Singing calls,
We hear about the times they laughed,
And charmed you, one and all,
We hear about "how well you danced",
The times they should have "warned" her,
But most of all they'll be upset,
Because they missed their corners!*

*It's so hard for a caller,
To come back home with us,
They've loved the way you have treated them,
You made an "awesome" fuss.
They'll try to tell us "what to do",
The "steps" that we should take;
Instead, we say, "please, take out the trash",
"Please mow the grass" for heavens' sake.*

*Our husbands, they are callers
You know them, one and all,
They love when they can sing to you,
They love when they can call.
So if you would, please help them out,
Do what they call "just right",
Cause, when this dance is over,
They go home with us tonight!*
